[3] She was shot and killed on 3 September 2012, at the age of 69. [6] At its height, Blanco was one of the richest and most dangerous women in the world, and was the world's most powerful drug leader. She became the first billionaire criminal ever to rule out her multi-million dollar drug trafficking empire with an iron fist, and became one of the deadliest women ever. Blanco's early life biography was born in Cartagena, Colombia, on the country's northern coast. She and her mother, Ana Lucia Restrepo,[7] moved to Medellin when she was three years old. Upon her arrival there, she soon adopted a criminal lifestyle. Charles Cosby, Blanco's former lover, recounted that at the age of 11, Blanco was kidnapped, tried to ransom, and eventually shot a child from an upscale flat neighborhood near her neighborhood. [1] [8] [9] Plunk had become a pickpocket before he reached it until 13. To escape sexual abuse from her mother's friend, Blanco ran away from home at the age of 16 and resorted to looting in Medellín until the age of 20. [1] The drug trade see also: Miami Drug War Blanco was a key figure in the history of drug trafficking from Colombia to Miami, New York and California. In the mid-1970s, Blanco and her second husband, Alberto Bravo, immigrated to the United States illegally with forged passports and settled in Queens, New York. They set up a large cocaine business there, and in April 1975, Blanco was indicted on federal drug conspiracy charges with 30 of her subordinates. She fled to Colombia before being arrested, but returned to the United States from Colombia coincided with the beginning of highly public violent conflicts involving hundreds of murders and murders a year linked to the high crime epidemic that swept through Miami in the 1980s. The struggle of law enforcement agencies to end the flow of cocaine Association between the Miami-Dade Police Department and the Anti-Narcotics Operation. [11] Blanco was involved in drug-related violence known as the Miami Drug War or the Cowboy Wars that plagued Miami in the late 1970s and early 1980s. This was the time when cocaine was smuggled over marijuana. [12] It was the lawless and corrupt atmosphere, created primarily by Blanco's operations, that led to the gang being called cocaine cowboys and their violent way of doing business in miami's drug war. The distribution network that covered the United States brought in $80,000,000 per month. [1] Her violent approach brought government scrutiny to South Florida, leading to the demise of her organization, miami's free-wheeled drug scene and high lights at those times. In 1984, Blanco's willingness to use violence against her rivals in Miami or anyone else who resented her, led her rivals to repeated attempts to assassinate her. In an attempt to escape the blows that were called to her, she fled to California. Arrested on February 18, 1985, she was arrested by DEA agents at her home and held without bail. After her trial. Blanco was sentenced to more than a decade in prison, [13] While in prison, she continued to effectively manage her cocaine business with the help of her son Michael Blanco, By pressuring one of Blanco's aides, the Miami-Dade State Attorney's Office obtained sufficient evidence to charge Blanco with three murders. However, the case collapsed due to technical aspects of the telephone scandal between the star witness and secretaries of the district prosecutor's office. In 2002, Blanco suffered a heart attack while in prison. [14] In 2004, Blanco was released from prison and deported to Medellín, Colombia. [1] Before her death in 2012, blanco was last seen in May 2007 at Bogotá airport. [1] Killed on the night of September 3, 2012, Blanco died after being shot twice. Once in the head and once in the shoulder by a motorcycle driver in Medellin, Colombia. [15] She was shot at a cardiff butcher's shop on the corner of 29th Street, after she bought $150 worth of meat. The middle-aged gunman climbed from the back of a motorcycle outside the shop, entered, pulled out a gun, shot Blanco twice before quietly walking back to his bike and disappearing into town. [16] She was 69. [5] Blanco's first husband, Carlos Trujillo, together had three sons, Dixon, Uber, and Osvaldo, [1] all of whom were poorly educated, [14] all of whom were killed in Colombia after being deported after prison sentences in the United States. [17] Her second husband was Alberto Bravo. In 1975, Blanco Bravo, who was also her business partner, faced a parking lot in a Bogota nightclub about the millions of dollars lost from the cartel profits they built together. Guardian reports: Blanco, then 32, pulled a gun, Bravo By producing an Uzi machine gun and after a incendiary gun battle he and six bodyguards lie dead. Blanco, who was slightly shot in the stomach, recovered and then moved to Miami, where the number of bodies -- and her reputation for cruelty -- continued to rise. [5] Blanco had her youngest son, Michael Corleone Blanco, with her third husband, Dario Sepulveda. [5] Sepulveda left her in 1983, returned to Colombia, and kidnapped Michael when he and Blanco disagreed over who would take over the reservation. Blanco paid for the murder of Sepulveda in Colombia, and her son returned to her in Miami. [17] According to the New Miami Newspaper, Michael's father and older siblings were killed before he reached adulthood. His mother was in prison for most of his childhood and his life, and was raised by his maternal grandmother and legal guardians. [17] In 2012, Michael was placed under house arrest after May was arrested on two felony counts of cocaine trafficking and conspiracy to trafficke in cocaine. [18] He appeared in the 2018 episode of the documentary Discovery Discover which refers to his infamous mother. [19] Blanco was openly bisexual. [20] [21] According to the New York Post, court records show Blanco was a drug addict who consumed huge amounts of basuco, a powerful form of smoke, unrefined cocaine... It would force men and women to have sex at gunpoint, and the bisexual was frequent. Her favorite possessions included emerald and gold Mac 10 pistol machine, Eva Byron pearls and tea set used by the Queen of England [sic]. The report goes on: In court, it was revealed that Blanco killed three former spouses as well as strippers and business rivals - and innocent passers, including a 4-year-old boy. [14] According to her youngest son Michael, Blanco became a reborn Christian.
